

WHAT IS REACH?

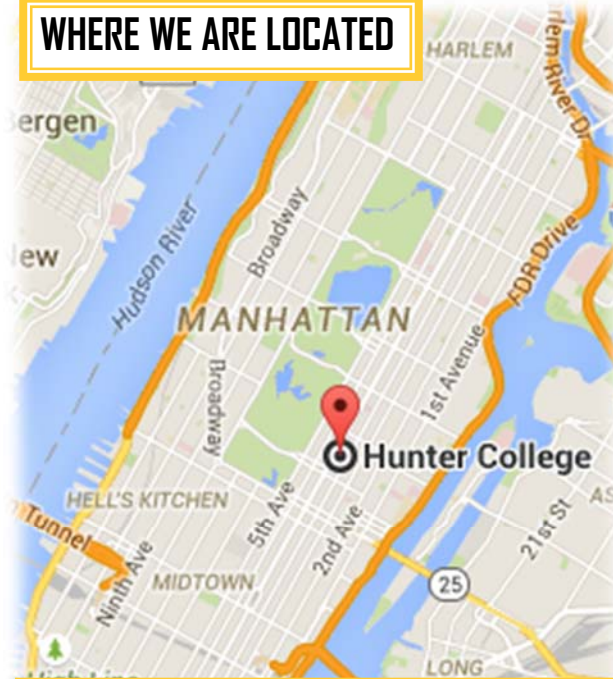

REACH is a community research capacity building program established at the Hunter College City University of New York (CUNY) Center for Translational and Basic Research. The program spearheads novel approaches to connect communities to relevant academics, disseminate health disparity educational information, train a culturally sensitive scientific workforce and support basic as well as translational research that addresses health determinants.

OUR SERVICES

- Free, tailored, health-related information
- Connecting researchers to a relevant community
- Connecting community organizations with researchers
- Strengthening the capacity and infrastructure of community-based organizations

WHERE WE ARE LOCATED

The CTBR is located within the Hunter College City University of New York (CUNY) on the Upper East Side of Manhattan in New York City. This extraordinary scientific research corridor between Central Park and the East River is also home to Rockefeller University, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, and Weill Cornell Medical College, among others.

GET INVOLVED

Deliver a Seminar or Workshop!

We would like to cordially invite you to deliver a seminar or workshop if you are a community based organization professional or academic experienced in conducting basic or translational research among disadvantaged or underrepresented minority communities.

Become a Partner!

Developing partnerships are critical. We welcome the opportunity to connect you with local and national organizations and researchers in order to complement your research or activities.

A few organizations REACH has partnered with:

- Weill Cornell Medical College
- The Bronx Health Link
- Hunter—Bellevue School of Nursing
- NYC Department for Youth Community Development
- CUNY Institute for Health Equity

Attend an Event!

Learn about health determinants research and how to strengthen the approach to community based research.

All our events are FREE and open to anyone

OUR MISSION...

The mission of the REACH program is to build capacity and advance methodologies in health disparities research in order to drive innovation and measurable impact in community health outcomes.

OUR COMMITMENT TO DIVERSITY..

Our interdisciplinary team of professionals is a reflection of our passion to represent diverse cultures, including minorities that are underrepresented, and to improve the health of the next generation. Additionally, we strive to attract future faculty members to CUNY Hunter College that reflect this commitment to health disparities.

OUR GOALS...

- Increase preventative health measures by designing workshops and learning tools that are targeted to the needs of the community
- Improve academic methodologies in community research by facilitating equitable partnerships with community organizations
- Engage local community organizations to participate and become active members of research in CBPR
- Empower disadvantaged communities to take responsibility for their own health by becoming active members in the research community.
